The Chicago We Want:

Next Generation Policy on Revenue, Housing, and Growth

Chicago has the talent, ideas, and commitment to make our city better. Join us for a jolt of energy as we reimagine what is possible for our Great American City, bringing fresh perspectives and bold ideas to the conversation about how we achieve real, tangible, and inclusive economic and social outcomes that benefit all Chicagoans.

On Monday, November 9, Metropolitan Planning Council (MPC) will bring together leaders from across sectors for a cocktail reception and provocative fireside conversation focused on the “what and how” of building an exponentially more dynamic and inclusive Chicago over the next 10 years. We’ll explore next generation solutions to reimagine growth and affordability for Chicago and other American cities, the revenue cities need to invest in people, communities, and systems, and what it will take to create meaningful, inclusive growth.

Come meet like-minded people who are bullish on Chicago and committed to making our city work better across all dimensions!
